Battle of Franklin

BY

George Davis

The Second Battle of Franklin (more popularly known simply as The Battle of Franklin) was fought at Franklin, Tennessee, on November 30, 1864, as part of the Franklin-Nashville Campaign of the American Civil War. It was one of the worst disasters of the war for the Confederate States Army.

Although the Union Army of the Ohio, commanded by Maj. Gen. John M. Schofield, left the field after the battle, the Confederate Army suffered devastating losses—including six generals killed or mortally wounded—in its unsuccessful frontal assaults against the Union defenders, sometimes called the "Pickett's Charge of the West." A further loss at the subsequent Battle of Nashville in December marked the end of Confederate General John Bell Hood's Army of Tennessee as a fighting force.

THE BATTLEFIELD TODAY

The Carter House, which stands today and is open to visitors, was located at the center of the Union position. The site covers about 15 acres. The house and outbuildings still show hundreds of bullet holes. The Carnton Plantation, home to the McGavock family during the battle, also still stands and is likewise open to the public. Confederate soldiers swept past Carnton toward the left wing of the Union army and the house and outbuildings were converted into the largest field hospital present after the battle. Adjacent to Carnton is the McGavock Confederate Cemetery, where 1,481 Southern soldiers killed in the battle are buried. Adjacent to the 48 acres surrounding Carnton is another 110 acres of battlefield, which is currently being converted to a city park.

JULY 4, 5, & 6, 2008

Much of the rest of the Franklin battlefield has been lost to commercial development. The spot where Gen. Cleburne fell, for instance, was covered until late 2005 by a Pizza Hut restaurant. Although the restaurant was purchased by a preservation group and demolished, the Civil War Preservation Trust continues to rank the Franklin battlefield as one of the ten most endangered sites.

Our Speaker George Davis was born 2 1/2 years before Pearl Harbor in the Panama Canal Zone. The Federal Government in the Canal employed his dad. He was nearly eight years old when the Japanese surrendered so he was able to spend many hours watching warships traverse the Canal.

In his block, there was an underground bomb shelter, which he occupied for an hour each month in practice. All streetlights were red and all household lights were red or blue. The Canal Zone expected to be bombed next by the Japanese.

After a stint in the U. S. Navy, Mr. Davis graduated with a degree in social studies from the University of Texas. He then spent nine years teaching history in Texas. In 1984, he moved to Arkansas to enter the satellite dish business with his brother who lived here.

Currently he is "retired" but is in his sixth year as a security guard at Cabot high school. His wife is in her 25th year as a nurse at UAMS. When she retires, they will live on Maine's largest island, in a house they have never spent a night in, but have owned for eleven years!

Mr. Davis joined Company "A" of the 6TH Arkansas, CSA, in 1995 and has taken part in many civil war reenactments in eight states, and plans on doing the same at Gettysburg next July.

Next fall when your friends asks, "what did you do last summer"? You could say, "I watched an amazing civil war battle at Gettysburg." Join 10,000 of your closest friends for the Gettysburg 145th National Civil War Battle Reenactment

NEED TO MOVE MONUMENT

With the coming Civil War Sesquicentennial, the push is on to move one of the Dodd monuments to McArthur Park near the Arsenal. (Seen above through the wire fence at the Law School.)

The monument originally marked the spot where they hung David O. Dodd. With the intervention of the Interstate off ramp, it was moved to state property across the street from the park. That property subsequently became the University of Arkansas Law School. However, it was deemed politically incorrect to have a civil war monument on that property, so the decision was made to move it.

The city of Little Rock was willing to accept the responsibility for the monument and place it in McArthur Park.

The Civil War Round Table of Arkansas is the last organization to endorse the project.

Drummer Boy Willie McGee, Civil War Hero and Fraud

Thomas Fox

Foreword by Joseph G. Bilby

On December 7, 1864, just one week after the bloody battle of Franklin, Tennessee, William McGee, a drummer boy from Newark, New Jersey, was credited with leading a Federal force to a decisive victory over the Confederates in a clash just thirty miles from the carnage at Franklin. This 15-year-old Irish-American, on convalescent duty and acting as an orderly to General Lovell Rousseau, was recognized for the capture of two guns, several hundred prisoners, and the saving of Fortress Rosecrans in Murfreesboro from the famed Nathan Bedford Forrest.

For his actions, young McGee would soon be awarded a Medal of Honor, written up in newspapers and books as a glorious New Jersey legend, be commissioned as a lieutenant in the United States Army at age 18, and then, inexplicably at the height of his notoriety, virtually disappear from history for more than 100 years. This is the story of a lost war hero, a man-child with the world at his feet, whose fall from grace is accelerated by fame, lies, alcohol, bigamy, and murder.

The Causes of the Civil War The Political, Cultural, Economic and Territorial Disputes between North and South

By Paul Calore

While South Carolina's preemptive strike on Fort Sumter and Lincoln's subsequent call to arms started the Civil War, South Carolina's secession and Lincoln's military actions were simply the last in a chain of events stretching as far back as the early 1750s. Increasing moral conflicts and political debates over slavery—exacerbated by the inequities inherent between an established agricultural society and a growing industrial one—led to a fierce sectionalism which manifested itself through cultural, economic, political and territorial disputes.

This historical study reduces sectionalism to its most fundamental form, examining the underlying source of this antagonistic climate. From protective tariffs to the expansionist agenda, it illustrates the ways in which the foremost issues of the time influenced relations between the North and the South.
